Public Health emergencies such as widespread illness, Pandemics, or other threats to public health and environmental safety are always a concern in densely populated living units such as DePauw or any university campus. The University takes a unified and proactive approach to Public Health and Environmental Safety. Student Life, DePauw Health and Wellness, Public Safety, Emergency Management, Facilities Management, and Campus Living work together in a preparedness model including prevention education with appropriate training exercised, prompt assessment and response to any and all threats. The University also works closely with local and state officials including the Putnam County and Indiana State Health Departments to promptly address imminent threats to our Campus Community.
